

Horsham Gaming Competition

The winners of last Summer's Horsham School's Gaming competition visit The Creative Assembly the sponsors of the event. The students were treated to a visit to the state of the art company HQ where Warhammer and other mainstream games are developed. Although the students were too young to see the 16+ & 18+ games such as Halo are created - it was eye opening to see how computer programmers, artists, animators, sound technicians and graphic designers collaborate to make extra ordinary games. The Horsham Company have deservedly won five Baftas - one of which we were lucky enough to hold - it was very heavy! The visit opened the possibility of the students to consider a career in gaming. Perhaps now a little extra attention will be paid in computer science, maths and art lessons from now on...
